خلاصه مقاله:

Citizen right and is education is one of the important issues in modern societies. Although this issue and its discussion lacks a historical background, it has gained a good attention during last century. Studying citizenship from Nahjolbalaghe and Imam Ali point of view is a good way to track this issue beak in the history since both of them are regarded as brother to Quran and scholar in Islam. Imam Ali was head of Islamic government and was fully familiar with language , religion, and racial differences political, ideological and discoursal groups were formed at that time. In this paper a definition of citizenship and its current condition is given along with Quran s view. Them Nahjolbalaghe and Imam Ali point of view were discussed on the effectual, behavioral and cognitive basis. Finally, it will be shown that citizenship has gone far away from its true meaning in this modern world and Imam Ali views compliance with .modern civil rights will be more clear
