خلاصه مقاله:

Today, public spaces can shape interactions and social relationships and provide the basis for achieving sustainable development in the sense of durability and permanence in cities. Also, traditional ritual shows and ceremonies, as dynamic cultural elements that are based on human beliefs and beliefs originated, it plays an effective role in increasing the social bond of the people of the society. In this research, after reviewing the theoretical issues, the effect of performing arts and architecture as two important elements to improve the quality of the urban space, which strengthens the integration of the society, has been discussed. The results of the research show that the design of the collective space in the right place, taking into account the concept of sustainability in the sense of permanence and encouraging and attracting citizens to attend collective spaces, can guarantee the promotion of social cohesion of "ritual arts".
