خلاصه مقاله:

This article examines the influence of English language education on economic growth and development of nations. Facilitating access to English language education and improving its quality directly affects various sectors of the economy. This study utilizes a comprehensive review of scholarly literature and empirical evidence to explore the multifaceted impacts of English language proficiency on economic indicators such as employment rates, international trade, foreign direct investment (FDI), and tourism. The findings suggest that a high level of English language proficiency among individuals contributes to enhanced employability in both domestic and global job markets. English proficiency enables individuals to access employment opportunities in multinational companies, international organizations, and emerging industries such as information technology and business process outsourcing. Moreover, countries with a strong English language education system attract more FDI and experience increased export opportunities due to effective communication with international partners. English proficiency also promotes the growth of the tourism sector by facilitating interactions with international tourists and improving the overall visitor experience. Furthermore, English language education plays a vital role in fostering innovation and technological advancement. Therefore, governments and educational institutions should recognize the significance of English language education and implement effective strategies to harness its potential for economic development.
