خلاصه مقاله:

Increase in non-oil exports, has always been at the head of the economic ,social and cultural development program objectives , also has a great importance in Twenty-year Perspective programs of the country. On the other hand, imposing unilateral sanctions on Iran, the country's economy is facing with challenges and opportunities that studying of how it affect on the economic indicators is critical. Therefore, this research has been studied the factors influencing non-oil exports with an emphasis on anti-Iran's sanctions in the winter of 1390. The time period used in this study is related to the seasons 1377 to 1391. The generalized method of moments is used to examine the relationships among variables. The ratio of Iran's goods export price index to the consumer price index for foreigners, similarly, oil revenues on non-oil exports are the results of this study which indicates the negative and the meaningful impact of sanctions. Also, the real unofficial exchange rate and GDP of foreigners have the positive and meaningful impact on .non-oil exports
