خلاصه مقاله:

During the past decades, governments in Iran have experienced various political discourses. This paper intends to review the impacts of these political discourses on Iranian economy. The principal research question is this: what were the effects of political discourses dominating trends of economic development in Iran during the past three decades? The research method is comparative-historical which specifically focuses on systematic and orderly comparison and analysis of the developments and trends. The findings of this paper show that political discourses dominating trends of economic development in Iran, except for some periods, did not have required progress and sustainability so that economic indices have experienced many ups and downs in the past three decades. This lack must be attributed to lack of an all-embracing discourse in the governments.
