خلاصه مقاله:

The present paper was designed to investigate the relationships between father-adolescent conflict and anti-social behaviour in adolescents. A sample of 385 school-going adolescents' boy and girl was randomly assigned to conduct this study. Cluster random sampling was used to select the samples. The Delinquent Behaviour Scale (DBS) is used to measure anti-social behaviour among adolescents. It shows a positive relationship between father-adolescent conflict and anti-social behaviour among adolescents. The Pearson product-moment correlation analysis is utilized to answer the above objective. The following conclusion can be drawn from the present study. There is a positive significant correlation ( $r=.298^{}$ ) between father-adolescent conflict and anti-social behaviour among adolescents. It was also shown that father-adolescent conflict was correlated with adolescent anti-social behaviour. That is, with an increase in father-adolescent conflict, adolescent anti-social behaviour increases. The Multivariate Regression Analysis was used to reach the last objective. Multivariate Regression suggests that among the six predictor variables examined in this study (perceived inter-parental conflict, father-adolescent conflict, mother-adolescent conflict, family income, father's age and mother's age), only perceived inter-parental conflict, father-adolescent conflict, mother-adolescent conflict and family income significantly explain adolescents' antisocial behavior. The total model explains 41.8 percent of the variance in adolescents' antisocial behavior.
