خلاصه مقاله:

The efficient use of various resources in today's harsh and competitive environment for doing the required activities of projects had become a necessity. Money and other resources have different values in different times. Therefore, in this article we have tried to give a comprehensive review about the time value of money, its importance and calculations, investment and project evaluation approaches and finally the investment plans used for control of rural businesses development and discussed them thoroughly. Research is in the process of reviewing texts, library studies and agricultural and entrepreneurial research and executive projects. The research methodology, based on interviews with financial experts, agriculture and farmers. The project control charts and tables, related to, planting twice a year in rice, were done in a case-by-case and practical manner. The results of study evidently and from different perspectives show that by efficient use of project control techniques, paying attention to time value of money & its importance, applying this concept and available resources in a business, the business under focus would be turned into a profitable one. Such business developments would be very useful and effective for economic development and success of business start-up projects.
